A Wrecker's Story The adventures of the party of wreckers who recently returned in the Caroline Mills would fill volumes, and among them we may relate the following shark story, which, from the frank and honest manner of our informant, we have on the wharf this morning. You ought to see the people coming down to the vessel to inquire about that Canton wreck story which was published in the Bulletin last night. They see the evidences and believe all but the tree story! Some of them won't swallow that. But it's easily explained. If you could only visit the

But there is a conclusive reason against so doing. First, the whole tendency of such legislation is to injure preference sharelfolders in other railways. If such Acts are passed. no one will ever be able to invest money in railways without knowing that some one else may not be put before him. The existing preference shareholders invested their money upon the etrength of Acts of Parliament which induced them to think that no one would ever be put before them. In a ship at sea, the last bottomry bond is always the better, but, then, all the lenders have notice, and charge accordingly. If there had been a risk of a pre preference stock, preferonce stock could not in most railways have been created at much more than the present value. Railway companies borrowed cheap, because what they offered was in appearance and by law a first and safe mortgage, and there will be real fraud if the railway companies are now allowed to create a charge which will in perpetuity created upon the distinct understanding that worked from the main donkey boilers. Anyhow, the street rudeness, offered to Mr. Carlyle seems to have furnished but a thin and meagre induction of facts upon which to been a large estimate of national character; or, if Mr. Ruskin had satisfied himself of the universal harbarism of the common tolk of was but a small and inadequate instance by list of July next. which to illustrate his general estimate of our national passions and character. Not that it much matters: for so long as Mr. Ruskin can deliver, himself of a concrous paradox, his end in talking is gained. But Mr. Carlyle did not quite relish this li-berty taken with his name. So he writes to the newspapers what is called a characteristic letter. Here it is:—

"A CONTRADICTION. "Sir.—In reference to a newspaper paragraph now idly circulating, with my name in it as connected with "insults on the streets," and other such matter, permit me to say that it is an antrue paragraph, disagrees with the fact through out, and in essentials is curiously the reverse o the fact; ta paragraph altogether erroncons misfounded, superfluous, and even absurd. "I remain. Sir, your obedient servant. 'Chelsea, May 28, 1867. . "T. CARLYLE

If this utterance is characteristic of Mr. Carlvle we can only say that the philosopher of Chelsea was for once forgetful of a philosopher's precision of language, and therefore of thought. If a matter or assertion is natrue, it is somewhat pleonastic to say that it disagrees with the fact, and if it is the reverse of the fact it is saying nothing to comment on its discordance with it. Or if a paragraph is erroneous; why be at the trouble of saving that it is superfluous, except for the sake of showing Mr. Carlyle's canacity for secreting adjectives? But this is not the most curious part of Mr. Carlyle's queer letter. The "untrue paragraph" is "curiously the reverse of the fact." The paragraph said, or is said to have said, that Mr. Carlyle "could not walk London streets without being insulted." Now the reverse of this is that Mr. Carlyle cau- | _____ corner House), with an uninterrunted not walk London streets without being cheered and applauded. The notion of Mr. Carlyle, cloaked and disguised, skulking about the Chelsca lanes, is almost equal to that of another philosopher with a lantern in broad daylight scarohing in vain for the honest wan. Unable to accept this account of Mr. Carlyle whenever he takes his walks abroad, the Times plunges into the extreme of laudation of London manners, and pronounces us to be the bestbehaved and politest populace on the earth. We cannot accept either view. We are neither better nor worse than our neighbours. Low life in all countries means bad manners. Our street blashbemies and coarseness are much the same as in all other cities. In the rates of premium for FIRE INSURANCE. THE Undersigned have (as already intimated in their Circular dated 14th October last.) received authority from the Secretary of the Royal Insurance Company to reduce the rate of Premium under certain circumstances, on privote residences and on Furnitures and effects therein contained. In cases of Dwelling Houses removed from the town the rate of premium will be three-quarters Steamer all the necessary articles connected per cent, in place of one per cent, per annum as hitlier to charged; and in cases of Residences so situated being detached or semi-detached the rate will be further reduced to one-half per cent.

The Royal's annual rates for Fire Insurance on the various classes of Buildings and their contents will therefore remain as follows until further notice. viz: Detached and semi-detached Dwelling Houses (removed from the) town) and their contents. Other Dwelling Houses (similarly situated) and their contents
